

And a client naturally...

And a client naturally... Once you have the blog server side set up, you obviously need something better than a webform to post the ramblings.

Installation of mozblog(<http://mozblog.mozdev.org>) went with some hickups. I really like the fact of pressing Alt-P, jotting down something and going back to where I was. No separate application, no nothing. We should seriously considering making the mozblog suitable for Xaraya. This kind of blogging is something I can relate to.