

Measured backlash, all is fine

Did some research on the allowed backlash and the general consensus seems that a $2/3$ " to 1" backlash measured on the outer rim of the brake disc is acceptable. (which seems very large to me actually)

I should have photographed a measuring tape next to the marks, but it's way less than an inch, so I guess I'm in the clear.